

THE RUIN OF ENGLAND

A Crime at the Gate of Heaven

All who love our matchless countryside and would save it from the destruction now going on all round us should read the article by the Editor of the C.N. appearing in the coming issue of My Magazine, ready everywhere on January 15. We take these words from it:

We are the first of all the generations to know these Islands well, and we are spoiling them. We are looking on at the ruin of a countryside that is fit to be the gate of heaven itself.

A bitter contrast it is to think of the England we inherited from our fathers and the England we are leaving to our children. Here it is, set in the very centre of the land of the world, as if it were its heart of hearts. We have this matchless possession, and what are we doing with it? We are allowing it to become a rubbish heap.
