THE BLUE BOY GOES · PORTIA PLEADS IN COURT · JACK FROST, ARTIST

Leaning Down Over London—The men who work on and about the tall buildings in London have many exciting moments, and here we see a painter at work in an awkward position on a big crane

Lady Barrister Pleads in Court—Miss Kyle, who has appeared in the Dublin High Court, is the first woman barrister to fight a case

Jack Frost's Beautiful Work—This is not a decorated Christmas-tree, but a fountain in Berlin which was frozen while it was still playing during the recent cold weather. It is covered with icicles

Teddy Goes for a Walk—A little Australian reader of the C.N. takes her big Teddy bear out with her and tries to teach it to walk

An Early Morning Ride in the Park—Horse-riding has always been a very popular recreation in England, and here we see a merry party of boys and girls, in charge of their riding-master, out for a canter in Hyde Park. This is the great meeting-place for riders in London, and well-known people may always be seen cantering up and down in Rotten Row

Off for a Run—Here is a new way of taking a dog for a run, but the terrier's little mistress on the pogo stick has hard work to keep up with the dog

The Last of the Blue Boy—Nearly a hundred thousand people visited the National Gallery to see the Blue Boy before the picture went to America, and here we see Gainsborough's famous picture being packed, ready for its voyage to its new home across the Atlantic

Motor Sleights Line Up for a Race—Driven by motor-cycle engines, these sleights can travel at a great speed on the ice, and here they are just lining up for a race across a frozen lake in New Jersey. Races of this kind are very popular just now in America and Canada
